PORTFOLIO TURNOVER

The Fund pays transaction costs, such as commissions, when it buys and sells securities (or “turns over” its portfolio). A higher portfolio turnover rate may indicate higher transaction costs and may result in higher taxes when Fund shares are held in a taxable account. These costs, which are not reflected in annual fund operating expenses or in the Example, affect the Fund’s performance. During the most recent fiscal year, the Fund’s portfolio turnover rate was 56% of the average value of its portfolio.

PRINCIPAL INVESTMENT STRATEGY OF THE FUND

The Fund invests primarily in U.S. common stocks, but may, to a lesser extent, invest in foreign common stocks and ADRs. The Fund will invest in small-cap companies and, to a lesser extent, in larger companies. For purposes of this policy, the Fund defines small-cap companies to include any company that has less than a $3 billion market capitalization at the time of acquisition.

The Adviser utilizes a combined approach of “top-down” analysis and “bottom-up” stock selection. The “top-down” approach takes into consideration such factors as long-term economic, demographic and geopolitical themes. These include such macroeconomic factors as interest rates, inflation, the regulatory environment and the global competitive landscape. As a result of the “top-down” analysis, the Adviser identifies sectors, industries and companies which it believes should benefit from the overall themes that the Adviser has observed. As part of its “bottom-up” stock selection, the Adviser then looks for individual companies with earnings growth potential that should exceed the earnings growth rate of the overall market over the long-term, and that may not be fully recognized by the market at large. In determining whether a particular company is suitable for investment, the Adviser focuses on a number of different attributes including the company’s specific market expertise or dominance, its competitive durability and pricing power, solid fundamentals, strong and ethical management, apparent commitment to shareholder interests and reasonable valuations in the context of projected growth rates. The Adviser’s investment strategy often involves overweighting the Fund’s position in the industry sectors which it believes hold the most growth potential relative to the weightings such industry sectors represent in the Fund’s benchmark.

The Adviser may sell a security if the reason for its original purchase changes or when better opportunities are available among similar companies. The Fund may engage in frequent and active trading of securities as part of its principal investment strategy.

PRINCIPAL RISKS OF INVESTING IN THE FUND

You could lose money on your investment in the Fund and the Fund could also return less than other investments.

Fluctuations in the value of the securities in which the Fund invests will cause the Fund’s net asset value, or share price, to fluctuate. Historically, the equity markets have moved in cycles and the value of the Fund’s equity securities may fluctuate drastically from day-to-day. Individual companies may report poor results or be negatively affected by industry and/or economic trends and developments. The prices of securities issued by such companies may suffer a decline in response. These factors contribute to price volatility which is the principal risk of investing in the Fund. An investment in the Fund may be more suitable for long-term investors who can bear the risk of these share price fluctuations.

Although the Fund is diversified, its investment strategy often involves overweighting the Fund’s position in the industry sectors which it believes hold the most growth potential. As a result, poor performance or adverse economic events affecting one or more of these overweighted sectors could have a greater impact on the Fund than it would on another mutual fund with a broader range of investments.

The Fund invests in small- and mid-cap companies. These companies may be more vulnerable to adverse business or economic events than larger, more established companies. In particular, these small- and mid-cap companies may have limited product lines, markets and financial resources, and may depend upon a relatively small management group. The securities of smaller companies are often traded in the over-the-counter market and, even if listed on a national securities exchange, the trading market (i.e., the volume of trades on any given day) for such securities may be less active than larger companies listed on that exchange. Consequently, the securities of these companies may be less liquid, may have limited market stability, and may be subject to more abrupt or erratic market movements than securities of larger, more established companies. As a result, the prices of the smaller companies owned by the Fund may be volatile, and the price movements of the Fund's shares will reflect that volatility.

Investments in securities of foreign companies, including ADRs, can be more volatile than investments in U.S. companies. Diplomatic, political, or economic developments, including nationalization or appropriation, could affect investments in foreign companies. Foreign securities markets generally have less trading volume and less liquidity than U.S. markets. In addition, the value of securities denominated in foreign currencies, and of dividends from such securities, can change significantly when foreign currencies strengthen or weaken relative to the U.S. Dollar. Foreign companies or governments generally are not subject to uniform accounting, auditing, and financial reporting standards comparable to those applicable to domestic U.S. companies or governments. Transaction costs are generally higher than those in the U.S. and expenses for custodial arrangements of foreign securities may be somewhat greater than typical expenses for custodial arrangements of similar U.S. securities. Some foreign governments levy withholding taxes against dividend and interest income. Although in some countries a portion of these taxes is recoverable, the non-recovered portion will reduce the income received from the securities comprising the portfolio.

The Fund is an actively managed mutual fund. Any actively managed mutual fund is subject to the risk that its investment adviser will make poor stock selections. Oak Associates, Ltd., the Fund's investment adviser, applies its own investment techniques and risk analyses in making investment decisions for the Fund, but there can be no guarantee that they will produce the desired results. This risk may cause the Fund to underperform other funds with a similar investment objective. In addition, frequent and active trading may result in greater expenses to the Fund and may generate more taxable short-term gains for shareholders, which may lower the Fund's performance.
