FUND INVESTMENT STRATEGY

White Oak Select Growth seeks long-term capital appreciation and invests primarily in the common stocks of established U.S. companies with large market capitalizations (usually defined as companies larger than $5 billion). White Oak is a concentrated mutual fund and usually holds 25 or fewer stocks. Although the Fund is diversified, its investment strategy often involves overweighting positions in the sectors the manager believes to hold the most growth potential.

The investment process begins with a top-down approach, analyzing key economic factors and identifying long-term trends. The manager then determines sectors and industries that have the best potential for long-term growth and focuses on key performers within those areas. Stock selection is based on both quantitative and qualitative factors, with the manager favoring companies which possess above-average growth potential at attractive prices.
